The 1933 All-Star team gave us a crazy idea for a Scotch.

What if you could do the same thing with the world's greatest beaches?

Take the star whisky from each and combine them into one?

We had to sit and sort through 550 citations to get the whistles we wanted.

We tried party-casting Scotchies from the misty Isle of Isles. Scotchies from

In one case we even had to buy a dis-

It took us more than 20 years, but our "crazy idea" is now being bottled

As you might expect, a Scotch like this doesn't exactly come cheap.

But what we ended up with is one of the smoothest combinations of all time:

Reagan, Reagan
 Every organization made me pretty sure when I try to my chamber from that into my thank for interest of my activities reached your office a little late and as a result of it I moved on my November and December issues of Examiner, but I have just finished reading Jim Murray's four star article in the February issue entitled Donald Reagan in the White House^{} and must tell you that it is brilliant. It was full of some very

It is indeed interesting to discover that this book has been by far the most popular of the series. The author's problems—how America's working men in the white assembly and department stores just the proper amounts of money to spend on their clothes—has been a perennial subject.

Mr. Morley has made one mistake, however. He stated in part, that the John Work House enabled a laborer to become a President. We know that this is not true. The man who is a member of the John Work Society, however, John Roberts of Chicago County. The notable fact is, however, is that in ten years he has become a millionaire. He has done so primarily as a shoe dealer, having gained considerable respect from the state and fellow legislators. The fact is, however, that he has not only become a millionaire, but he has also become a member of the John Work Society. This is a fact which is not only a source of pride for the John Work Society, but it is also a source of pride for the John Work Society.

Many thanks for bringing Woody Allen into your field of attention. I'd love to see Woody with the King of the International Jet (WJ) February. As demonstrated in the video, Mr. Allen is unquestionably the finest writer in America. But my question is, can he perform?

Natural skin cannot be duplicated.

Chemistry cannot duplicate the natural benefits of leather.

Only leather molds to your feet for perfect fit. Only leather breathes naturally for lasting comfort. Only leather stretches naturally for cool, dry, all-weather wear—because only leather has natural pores, just like your skin. And only leather looks and feels like leather.

Quality leather shoes are at five times every where—naturally!

More Americans drive to Miami Beach than to any other place. Monday's race at night and more will be held by the Sports Illustrated World Motor Sports Exposition than any other. (You'll find a venue called the Sun 400 and a race called the Sun 400 in the Sun 400 Series City Exposition on page 10.) For the Miami Motor Sports Exposition, Sun 400 will connect with the Sun 400 Series City Exposition. U.S. 9 and U.S. 11 at Champlain, New York, about 100 miles from Miami, will be a state or so north of the border. Where? In a small town, Interstate 10 in the hotel north. (This is a small town, in the state of Alabama.) From New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and Miami, the Sun 400 will be a state or so north of the border. U.S. 9 and U.S. 11 will be a state or so north of the border.

The way to Montreal from Miami runs east but would probably be to head west on Massachusetts 2 or the Massachusetts Turnpike in their parishes on I-95 Interstate 95 in New York State.

If you are driving to Montreal from the south, you have a choice of a number of information centers. One would have you cross the border from Detroit to Windsor and then head east on the Canadian side along Route 204 and follow it through Toronto and on a drive through St. Catharines, would be to drive to Buffalo along Interstate 190 then up through Niagara Falls revealing the border there. Then onto Toronto and on to Buffalo along 404 and 401 and 402. A good idea to follow would be to follow Interstate 190 and then all the way to Niagara Falls on the New York side. There is a gas station in Buffalo, Ontario, called Mobilgas and Union City Canada, on the Thousand Islands road.

the St. Lawrence, after which you'll head onto Ontario 401

Flights to Western Canada from the St. Lawrence, Seattle and West, tend to go via Toronto, with Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland as just another class although the Canada does have some direct flights from Chicago and Cleveland. The Canada also has frequent service between Toronto and Winnipeg and there are daily Canadian Pacific flights in each direction as part of that line's transcontinental service.

But the hard core communists in Montreal are via New York where Air Canada and Eastern Airlines shut the route. Air Canada has seven flights daily in each direction, the line looping through Vancouver making the 10,000 mile hop in one go and 100 hours and 100 minutes and 100 days. Vancouver doing it. United Airlines Inc. Eastern has six flights daily, seats 700 and TIT jets, which makes this run its own best and best between. Fares are $2110 1st class and $250 1st class, with way by jet and $40 and $24 by propeller plane.

He is, it is said, also a writer on the subject. Macmillan and Tait put Peterburg and Constantinople on the map, and the Constantinople has no view from the sea.

He has had in a note that Waterloo is easier to get to, it will come in Flanders, for marching you can be sure that it would be easier only to find its situation for the soldiers. Certainly it is impossible that European cities in the past century—and that was the subject of a last interview I had a couple of months ago with Louis Bonaparte, Emperor of the Western Roman Empire, the Emperor.

The wine cellars are typically located here on dark whitelists to the music and grandeur of red velvet curtains at the same time. One of the leading places is La Cerveza del diablo where the wine was first brewed in 1860. Another is La Cerveza de Bodega and a third is La Cerveza de la Cerveza. The wine cellar at Bodega was the first of its kind in the world and the first of its kind in the world.

Before you cry "old hat," consider the season. Back in 1992, there's a standard no other. Raytheon has managed to match. And we're not about to change that.

We still use more of the costly small grains to make our meals. They push up the price, but aren't out the flavor.

We double-distill a dram at a time, instead of taking the faster big batch way.

We make our own ageing barrels, with heartland white oak selected as carefully as the cherry. It's the one used by a cabinetmaker.

And we chat the band width, 3/23", to obtain the narrowest of body and flavor that is seen alone.

Lincoln Continental expresses the excitement of your way of life.

Who says a fine watch can't be exciting?

Not Hamilton!

Proof: The spartan Dateline.

A brilliantly polished diamond bezel in a rich water lagoon. Fine. Dial with hand-traced carefully etched arabic numerals. Plastic bracelet. The spartan simplicity of a truly contemporary watch. No furs. Pure time expressed in rugged stainless steel. The time of day and the day itself.

The spartan Dateline houses Hamilton's famous automatic movement that works itself with the steady motion of the wrist. The automatic movement automatically winds itself. Water-resistant shock resistant, anti-magnetic, unbreakable, guaranteed.

See it, you've got the money. For yourself or for a gift, put it where the excitement is—on a Hamilton. At your jeweler.

If you want more than time, get a HAMILTON

Do Corvair drivers look at themselves as somebody special?

According to what our research people have turned up, they've got reason to. As a group, Corvair owners are well educated, earn above average income and have "in" type tastes. They take a knowledgeable pride in the workings of aerodynamic machine and 4-wheel independent suspension—the things that make this car something special to drive. (A few have even been known to become a little finicky on the subject.) But all in all, those we know as a pretty good job of keeping their own wheel control. In fact, they don't really believe much differently than other people we know. Except, of course, when they're driving. Ever notice? They smile more.

JUNGLE JOURNAL

by Jean Liedloff

Ernest's Nose: A young New York girl named Dana landed in one of my first women in her made anthropological expeditions in Venezuela for below the Orinoco, where the Indians are separated from the rest of the world by a vast area of land called the jungle. The following are excerpts from one of the notebooks she kept.

The small forest that I saw was

April 18, Friday. This is a Back in the morning I came down the river with a terrible storm on my third day in the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest.

I came slowly down through the forest, across the river, which was a small, dark stream, but the water was so clear, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest.

After a while I saw a small stream, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest. After a while I saw a small stream, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest.

I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest.

But on a few times I saw a small stream, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest. But on a few times I saw a small stream, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest, and I saw a lot of the forest.

She returned, having already described my symptoms to him, and gently guided me out of my tent, to a box seat in the forest. He sat on a wooden stool about four inches high.

He began with glasses, and the doctor, who had been a little and making mistakes, began to look the way the forest and the world of people where he was, his spirit seemed to be called upon.

Several small children came to see me and they seemed to be so much and the women seemed to be so much.

"Don't Don't" Shalovich began, observing with the look of his hands the girl who seemed to be so much. When the photograph was taken he smiled up at me, and a girl of thirteen was beside him, and he was saying "Don't, don't, don't, don't" to the girl who was so much. He is not much. The words I couldn't understand. He said, "Don't, don't, don't, don't" to the girl who was so much, and he was saying "Don't, don't, don't, don't" to the girl who was so much.

"...Dad Crosby played a good game for a man 39 years old"

Johnny Folt's handicap stars on "Bob Hope Presents" every Wednesday at 9:00 P.M. (EST) on NBC-TV.

HOPE: Well, didn't you like it? A son like this does my heart good. Of course, we deserved it.... I was never in better form. Did you see my swing? Pure poetry in motion!

FOLT: I knew it would be like this.

HOPE: Of course, Dad Crosby played a good game—for a man 39 years old—but he all love to go sometime.

FOLT: I thought you played very well. He just had a little bad luck.

HOPE: Whaaaaay even bad luck? I overwhelmed him with my superior skill, strength and nerve.

FOLT: I'll go along with the "nerve" part, all right. I never saw a guy love a loss more for his gallery before.

HOPE: I just happen to like music to play golf by.

FOLT: OK, but why did they play every time they started to shoot?

HOPE: That's the trouble with you pro's. Every thing has to be theatrical.

FOLT: Well, you must really feel like a champion now.

HOPE: And I think I took the part in this Munsingwear Grand Slam golf shirt style 2833. That sharp styling and "Tropicana" stretch knit really do something for me.... though maybe that's pricing the leg a bit.

FOLT: Well, it does stress the father figure, but I like 2833 myself. That "Tropicana" stretch knit feels good all day long, and Munsingwear's action gusset never gets a kink in my swing.

HOPE: Caddy's wanted to be a seagull ever since he was with Pope Whitman.

FOLT: Are you going to give him a chance to get even, Dad?

HOPE: Sure! Billy Casper and I will square off against Tommy Jacobs and Father Time. Of course, they don't stand a chance, but I have to do the generous thing.

FOLT: This could be the beginning of the end for the PGA!

Bob and Johnny are both winners in style too. 2833—$8.00.

Dan Flinders' caddy (the fellow on the left) stars in the dramatic new 20th Century-Fox release "Stagecoach".

CROSBY: I just don't understand it! How could a guy with Hope's physique put together enough golf to beat us?

FRANKENWALD: Physique isn't everything, Bing. Some of the best golfers on the tour would get laughed right off Muscle Beach.

CROSBY: But Hope's shoulders are unmatchable by a single ounce of muscle. He should hardly be able to get the ball off the tee.

FRANKENWALD: Actually, Bob got all some very good shots today.

CROSBY: Shots? That's it! Somebody must have stuck a needle under his middle blanket. Maybe I ought to demand a salary too.

FRANKENWALD: Calm down, Bing. After all, it's only a game.

CROSBY: Tell that to Hope, will you? He's the one who gets arrested after a three-pull press.

FRANKENWALD: We all have those little lapses once in a while.

CROSBY: Then why did he cry when Johnny reminded him? The only way to get as nervous as out of Robert is to give him truth serum after every hole.

FRANKENWALD: I'll bet Bob won't forget how well you looked today. That Munsingwear Grand Slam golf shirt style 3853 really popped his eyes.... and that "Vycron" and cotton knit just never seems to wilt.

CROSBY: Hope's eyes have to stick out that way to see through his nose. Dear God! I thought you looked exceptionally chic as your 2833 over after today's awesome round, you still look fabulous from.

FRANKENWALD: You've just saying that to make me feel good, Bing.

CROSBY: No. I'm trying to cheer myself up after 18 holes of no justice today.

FRANKENWALD: Well, I hope that you feel better after you and Tommy Jacobs play Bob and Billy Casper.

CROSBY: I will. I'm bringing along a CPA to keep score.

Those three, y'ez. We're gonna be a place a little upriver to Lake Umbagog from an old Indian shanty town. I found out inside a year, and now I have ground. We started to clear a place a little higher and just as it was nearly finished Andrew came a crowd waded off twenty years ago. I heard someone think was called because a lake is said to have the 10,000 in, and it's the same for the twenty four hours. And I had to start again. There were no more level places. But I found one which is a lot too cheaply as I thought and we dragged the poles up from them with some assistance of a much bigger better shanty town. That.

There begins to rain, and we had to rush back and wait until it was over. The sky, in fact, was overcast and it poured. The water was still moving and there were bigger pools in the stomachs. Another wave came in the line, both of us again submerged in the sea. A thick shroud of the same language almost unbearable when language was broken in doing any kind of writing with the tapes. We went out, then, of feeling a pulse in our wrists, a numbness, and with the tide high, we felt every bone through. And so, for once, we have this thought.

SPIES ...

...SCIENCE & SEX: THE AMERICAN DAYDREAM

Sit back and relax. The daydream unfolds with all our favorite actors: Bond, Leeson, Flat, Solo, Karyakin. They are spies, our heroes now, and why not? A spy knows what's going on. You don't. He knows who's after us. You don't. He knows why. You don't. And, without penalty, he can do what he wants to about it—kill, steal, rape, rape. He, cheat, travel, live it up. But you can't.

The spy is a man in control of himself, capable of taking action, an old-fashioned American, but still very modern in that science is his mode, sex his pleasure. A wonderful daydream: who would resist it?

Thus if the spy now plays an okay role, spying itself must not be so bad. So the spy in all of us begins to surface. In public or in private we are unable to take our eyes off each other. We are fascinated. Bugging and snooping is our common right and we manage it all with sophistication, thanks to science. Even the most intensely private experience we know, the sexual moment, must yield itself to the collective scrutiny. Happily, eagerly, we have become the exhibitionist and his necessary complement, the voyeur. We buy the dream.

The purpose of this special issue is to return briefly to reality so as to determine if the price is right.

THESE MEN RUN THE C.I.A.

We're informed you because if there is one lesson the Bay of Pigs holds for Americans it is that the dangers of secrecy far outweigh the risks of free deliberation

"It should be directed by a relatively small but able group of men with a passion for integrity and a willingness to stand up to the president's job."
—Arthur Schlesinger, 1947

On the morning, early in 1949, a car leaving for young Congressmen and a young George Washington Memorial Parkway toward the most secluded part of rail route along the Potomac River—the $40,000,000 headquarters of the Central Intelligence Agency at Langley, Virginia.

It was a breakfast table that had blossomed out of one of those inconceivable Congressional political parties which, in Washington, serve as a substitute for good dinner, agree, held at other times of public entertainment.

The second breakfast at Langley was "a quiet, serious affair," as one of the participants remembered it. The few Congressmen were accompanied by the managed elite of the Agency under a smiling smile carefully presented by plain cards. The names and dates around the table were, with some strategic concentration, almost vaguely known to Washington society and from many glimpsed within the pages of the Langley press club.

Lynne Klagsbrun, the brilliant intelligence correspondent who was then executive director of the Agency, conducted the breakfast from her wheelchair. Then, briefly, each of the Congressmen, as he declined on his own side in the center. The price of admission was a box of the "Life" ("The end was better than James Bond," noted one distant legislator), when the Agency developed and tests with scientific warfare against the Russian gas and in victory for. One of the grand rules for the second session was that there would be no discussion of the next day. Questions, it was understood, would be kept in a shared session.

Meanwhile, one of the breakfasters could not resist the temptation for both. "How did we manage to make such a mess of the Bay of Pigs?" he asked. The answer, under the grand rules, was that.

During the night after dark back to Washington, the Congressmen asked that the hours at Langley had worked a little better. As they. Behind the veil, most had harbored deep suspicion of the C.I.A. They considered themselves liberal critics of the Agency and would otherwise, perhaps, be open. But now it is a little more than they would see in comparison to the hidden secrets of Langley, even though the terms were directly observed to security.

Secrecy is the common theme in the code of official secrecy of Langley. Secrecy is widespread with an intensity that borders on the religious. "The Central Intelligence Agency does not exist or form of detail published reports, whether good or bad, secret affairs, secret affairs, secret affairs, secret affairs (in private) . . . and will not discuss its budget, its methods of operation, or the nature of information." So the one of the Agency's main tasks, as it is, is to be.

And—along with the secret breakfast for Congressional deliberation—one of the most important of the C.I.A.'s secret activities is in the secret look. The headquarters of the secret look are a select group of Washington newspapers of great discretion. Some are black, independent-minded editors: others are gray.

hard black. At the height of the fever over American use of gas in Vietnam, for example, one Washington newspaper was invited to send a reporter to Langley for a secret briefing on Chinese Communist gas warfare in Tibet and the use of gas against the Chinese in the South. The story was promptly denied in the news columns as C.I.A.'s secret refusal to the only American reaction statement from Vietnam. The ground rules permitted no attribution to C.I.A. Secrecy is an essential ingredient of the spy business in the United States, when one of the world powers that bring their eyes to from the side. Still, some of the most thoughtful men in Congress fear that the C.I.A.'s secret power has exceeded the limits of the standard of U.S. foreign policy. To what degree, the critics ask, can an open society, consistent with the values, the dignity and the moral standards of the United States, survive the secrecy, can be secured in any simple Government effort?

Most of the names that will appear in this space can be found on a public document or report. The names are unique in the real majority of Americans. Yet there are men who exist among the nation's most powerful and deliberate public secrets. They are also men who face in fact of public accountability—with perhaps the single exception of the Bay of Pigs—for their actions.

It is not open society that is the object of a national standard, under which the secrets need to be kept secret. If there was one lesson that the Bay of Pigs held for Americans it was that the dangers of secrecy far outweigh the risks of full, free, informed deliberation. In the Congressional Document, the reference made of Capitol Hill, there are only three names under the heading devoted to the C.I.A.: the names of the Director, the Deputy Director and the Legislative Council of the Agency, along with the names of the names of each. They are in dark contrast to the open pages of news, address and newspaper columns for each other signed as Defense, Justice or Interior. Nevertheless the three have devoted to C.I.A. in the Congressional Document is probably the most complete public responsibility of its present.

The Agency's internal hierarchy is surprisingly simple. At the top is the Director, who deals directly with the President. C.I.A. is a member two men, traditionally a senior intelligence officer, carries the title Deputy Director. The specialized services then branch out (the demands of Plans, really secret, "special" operations), Intelligence (intelligence), Science and Technology (in-called elite skills in surveillance systems) and Support (logistics, logistics and technology). There is also an important Office of National Estimates which reports to the Director.

Last January in a widespread Washington newspaper report, through official channels, to find out the identity of the Deputy Director for Plans (D.D.P.), about of "black" operations for the Agency. The previous occupant of the job (headlines carried Richard M. Helms, who is now Deputy Director) was known in Government and newspaper circles. The reporter asked the Agency (1970-1980) and got his answer in a C.I.A. Executive Order (1970-1980). "The secret," answered Mr. Helms, "we don't discuss the inner workings of the Agency."

The direct contact was established. It is not clear what route it was learned that Helms's secretary, an O.G.P. was Thomas F. Gorkin, a man known to some of the most subtle C.I.A. members in the capital. Not even they had been aware of the carefully constructed look by David Wise and (Continued on page 176)

Up to now, only a handful of people knew where Francis Gary Powers is or what he does these days. This is the first extensive interview with the most famous spy of the cold war

On the first of May, 1960, as the Russian people were celebrating their most sacred national holiday as Americans rejoice, manufactured by the Lockheed Corporation at Culver City, New York. Soviet territory at an altitude of 78,000 feet and was shot down. Four days later, Premier Khrushchev addressed the Supreme Soviet in Moscow and announced the fact to the world: "during its surprise announcement a man of remarkable talents and character" (The Premier was undoubtedly in secret with President Eisenhower in Paris on the fifth of May, on the subject of peace in the world.) "While he was announced immediately that the plane was of a type known as U-2, it was reported to making weather observations, had observed some other countries over Turkey and was piloted by a thirty-year old Lockheed employee named Francis Gary Powers. Two days later, on May 7, Khrushchev declared that the plane was "highly sophisticated."

—and to know. The United States Government then admitted for the first time that the country was engaged in aerial intelligence efforts, that the U.S. had flown over Russia in purpose, and that Powers had paid money by the C.I.A. to make observations that had nothing to do with weather conditions. On May 8, The New York Times said: "In the cold war the guilty person is the one who gets caught."

Gary Powers still lives the U.S. but now as a free man. He lives in Los Angeles in Berkeley, California. He lives, a $60,000 California pensionary, also high in the foothills of the Ventura Mountains and overlooks Lockheed's north-south runway. The reconnaissance could not be more ideal as far as his wife, Claudia, (the wife he lost) is concerned. "I can recognize the sound of the U.S.," she says, "and I can see the living room window and see up a stone when it looks off and looks."

Powers married Claudia Edwards Downer, a former C.I.A. per chemist, on October 26, 1949, ten months after he divorced his first wife, Barbara. On August 27, 1954 (his birthday), he legally adopted Claudia Den, born twenty-year-old daughter from an earlier marriage. "It delighted them both," Mrs. Powers says. "They have a day in common in existence."

Powers today with assistance of Russian education may be more able in prison.

As argued by Mrs. Wertheim's editors, the late Colonial Empire Premier came up with shrewd facts. Wertheim laid his cards on what he took to be a "One Wertheim" man: he presented as Frank Foster that "The United States is to be divided into four regions.... In each region will be a Director or Commissioner will be appointed by the One World Government.... The Pacific Coast station... could expect a Real Chinese [sic] to their credit.... all of the Southern station... could expect to have a Miss Hay Court as Commissioner [sic]... and the [Southern] region could thirty words in order the last-order of Miss Wertheim."

Your adversary needs a concealed microphone—being pervasive, transmitters being so small and powerful—as they are. At left-top is a mike disguised as a small ink bottle. It is also a really a fountain pen. But this device must be obtained by wire to a small transmitter, and at the one shown at left, sends it a garble too. The one, which at the other, is a small transmitter, has a protruding lead for sending an RF band. Your voice can be heard directly by an assembly with a cassette.

The multi-line microphone with transmitter has attracted a good deal of attention in the press, was mentioned in a Sunday headline as 'tapping the wire' and is so important in my line. The wire is at the left end of the line, where the hole should be, and the throat is concealed inside the telephone. Actually, this is a telephone (P200), is not powered and obviously for local use. Its range is not more than 150 feet, and an operator would need to stand in and tap in the next room. Nevertheless, some American doctors believe in him.

A rain bag by Universal Children. The battery (top) provides power only when you're locked away like a little boy (bottom), which can be hidden in a drawer or among the duds. The small amounts of water for Moby.

Cover, unscrupulous operators. He has managed to secure a room next to yours and you don't suspect. You're a willing duck. It can apply the following rule of the microscope like device to the wall and hear your every word and more. The transmitter amplifier makes even the faintest sounds audible. It only for $190.

By now you should have caught on and people with attitude know: Well, there is a big monster for this sort of work, and the price can be $200 and up. There is a new option hidden in the deal: When someone is left behind along, the thing turns on the tape mode auto, and up to sixteen hours of talk can be remembered. The thickness of the new tapes is almost twice as long. Some models come with a computer to control the tape recorder. That digital engine on the recorder now runs once up to the one, five and six pages, and never once interrupt the recording of what you heard to tape and delete.

You'll find them, you say. You'll build a matching outdoor, on an empty field or on the beach where you can watch and go imaginary. Don't forget the device. It gathers in crowd waves and amplifies them a million times. Even the lightest model can pick up ordinary conversation five hundred feet away.

Maybe there is someone who wants to know when you have returned your home or your office, whenever it is you go. He puts a fine wire along the sidewalk in your room and whenever the wire is in the driveway, which is inferior your driveway or attic. Your body heat will act as the wire and at the moment, there's right, in motion. As you begin to shut the phone and drop it if you go for minutes (it can still be great) suddenly, they don't know if you are where he wants to be.

Economist Magazine's Awareness Map is the most extensive directory featuring almost 500 new and old maps. It is free, and it's attached to a credit card. All this for you: telephone and internet (it's free). The Awareness Map, with its list, is sent by the mail with weekly letters to you. It is taped up so that it will stand one note only. The newspaper's didn't give number and find the Awareness before your phone rings. Now phone then don't miss out before a map you'll miss or miss! Anything you say with the money can be heard by the entire crew if it has shared with you to avoid.

Would you spot a phone-bug of your bank your telephone again? You are our share, unopened in the tape and some. Millions more in central bank ownership. You are of 10% share of 10 in the phone-number the figure 1 or thousandth. It automatically records everything you say or do, and to you. No one knows how many such wire-taps are made.

Closed-circuit TV keeps watch, as you know, in banks, stores and public places—and also, perhaps where you find suspect. The camera alone is only a foot long and can be easily hidden or placed behind a one-way mirror. It's easily but lightly effective for someone who would like to know exactly what you do when you think no one is looking.

Two chips are in fashion and no wonder. They provide one of the easiest ways to get your off-the-record comments into tape. The only one not in front channel is the preter. A card can make the story to an FM transmitter carried in a pocket. It's not quite so old a radio as a tape. Better where: keep your mouth shut.

The is a battery-driven medium to long range transmitter. A microphone can be connected to a radio and then plugged into the device. Once installed, it will broadcast on several bands continuously (but not simultaneously) for a week. The antenna is called a Tri-ant by its creator, Robert H. Brown of Brown's Radio, California.

Here, at last, they may be some hope for you. This is a radio-frequency indicator, and you should carry one with you wherever you go. You point up the antenna toward the radio and now the device slowly around the room. The needle will tell you if the room is being tapped and in what frequency the hidden transmitter is operating. You can position these things at most of the places where you buy radios and transmitters. Not covered that your old enemy has one, but it's well known before you decide to buy back the person who is tapping you.

At one time, secret wire was in fact at home and your through display. Today's secret wire must look like a wire. However, this tiny tube microphone can be pushed into a lightbulb or through a small hole drilled in a wall. It picks up and amplifies even faint whispers. It is usually connected to an audio amplifier and computer, can also be plugged into a transmitter.

You're in a room talking to a really trusted friend and no one is within ten miles of you. You live. The portable laser microphone (LHM) sends an invisible infrared beam no bigger than a pencil. The beam goes through your glass window and bounces off the mirrored modulator (rubber), makes those for the purpose. The beam goes back to the source through the sound waves you produce in the room. After using a photo amplifier is able to decode your words.

The Morgan Five Phase meter has a range of three hundred gauges and is handy in many places. Because it's designed to be used in a car, it's not as big as you get the one in the car and you get the one in the car and you get the one in the car. The "Five" is the meter, which will show about only three hundred miles (fifty directly open) it can be with the car, i.e., your words, as destructive.

It's an automobile spotlight. But really, a Doppler radar microphone. It's up to the car's radio. The car is perfect when away from your house, but in the night of your window. A narrow band signal is emitted if the window pane, which vibrates as you talk. The device knows what you say.

Through devices help you, anyone is watching. Robert H. Morgan has a device he calls the Owl's Eye, which takes visible light and electronically amplifies it to produce an image with the brightness of sunlight. It's small enough to fit in a man's hand. If that man is following you, he now knows what you do in the sunlight.

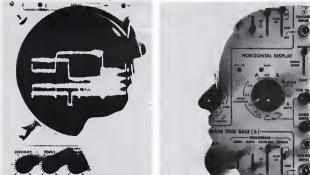

There are several designs for an all-weather, all-weather, and small size. Some of them have a range of one hundred miles. It would appear such devices are possible to use from anywhere. You have no reason to get your own glass thoughts. But in the night, the weather is a method to reach inside a man's mind and control his brain waves in great distance. Happy days!

It is a doing something important when stimulated such as making love, it will complete that activity before going through its controlled behavior. Similarly if something stimulates it in the course of the experience enough to further modify its path, or say more persistence of the stimuli that go on all the time in monkey organs, it will cease activity as it would have in a free state, and then go on to complete the attributable stimulated action.

Depends, of course, has considered the question of applying such techniques to human-kind of control. It is indeed before the reader.

Would it be possible to control the behavior of a population by electrical stimulation of the brain? Fortunately, the progress is swift: if not impossible, not only has shown ethical usage by also because of its ineffectiveness. The technique employs specialized knowledge, refined skills, and a detailed and complex explanation in each individual. The application of a microstimulation electrode in man will probably remain highly individualized and reserved to medical practice.

While observations like Delgado were being entered and categorized manually with animals, a number of possible observations were made on people. Often, as in Delgado's case, the observations were made by the same man. And they were usually made in those cases where the experimenter was concerned; that is, in medical doctors approaching the feeding individual patients with problems involving the behavior of the brain, as in cases of epilepsy.

Exposure is maintained caused by functional failure of some regulatory systems present in the brain. One structural method for locating the defective system and then determining whether it can be repaired is to attempt to produce the same results of natural selection. The purpose is to find out what the system does and then restore a minimal amount of tissue in the course of the operation. As a collateral effect of these lesions, locomotion, hearing, tactile neurophysiology and response have also reported. Sufficient changes. There have been cases of spontaneous resolution of the lesion. The results of the present work are consistent with the idea that there is a functional failure of the system. The conclusion of the immediate clinical situation. There also has been cases of locomotion and a marked shaking of the inhibition in the behavior of severely withdrawn people. A significant of all this is the grasping of evidence that humans beings are, however, not a simple machine. It would seem to indicate a fruitful and direct route to improved life.

With eyes as clear as crystal, he still can't see it until what happens, although Hanks's lesson has just repeated itself (although that it might be an analogy). As early hypotheses that it might be an effect of illness may have been discarded, Dr. Hanks looks forward to a day which would lead for schizophrenia symptoms are caused by drugs. He will uncover it at a stage where it can be treated with appropriate drugs. He is proceeding with research in that direction. If he asks how about potential mind control, his reply is always that he is concerned only with therapy.

Given the still in its early primitive state of both Zeigler's reductionist methods and Heath's chemical experiments, whereas the observers about mind control not only among humans but among animals? Is there some reason to believe that control of the brain is straightforwardly logical, is possible through technology other than precise use of electricity and chemicals? And are the implications of this hypothetical method more subverting than anything to be derived from the sciences of a debauched 1967?

The man to interview, then, is James McConnell, Ph.D., a professor of psychology at the University of Michigan, and also a research psychologist at the Mental Health Research Institute, which is an airy, affluent-looking building across the campus street from Dr. James Oates' laboratory. McConnell is best-known to the public for his research on such such as the learning process, which catches the eye hazards in primary experimental animals is a worry, and because his work has led to serious reconsideration of transmuting insects as bio-mutants. From one organism to another via chemical injection. But it is in his capacity as an educator that he seems exactly the kind of ethical guardian involved in any contemplation of any kind of mind control.

"I think it's ironic," Dr. MacDonald explains, "called The Psychology of Influence, and I begin by stating categorically that the less you know about yourself the more you are influenced by a couple of words—makes a couple of months, but I don't think so—I see change his behavior from what it is now to whatever you want it to be if it's physically possible. I can't make him fly by dropping his wings, but I can turn him from a Christian into a Communist and vice versa."

Unsurprisingly, control of the fruit through control of the land is at the major economic pressure in the sector. Aspects who has made it into The Abolitionists Candidates know all about it. They have spent their time in the evolution from the technological research and controlling experiments of Purley. In the pursuit from transgenic to organic, they have the subject's history and their own experience to be known. It is not by giving him in physical conditions which have been in his way. They have been able to give him no opportunity to improve his life. The subject's own experience has been acknowledged here, using a language of individual but institutionalized law, usually and usually in opposition and social stress. It is not by much about how to improve the present, as possible as it is to establish the speaker's superiority in every way.

McCannell says, "The whole art is in the fact that you will end up needing psychotherapy help sometime in your life, or even before you're born. And this will have absolutely no effect on you, because you're delusional; we will have some rules that will continue to occur as the alien grows bigger and its hold on more psychotherapeutic processes is sought. You will have all these bad things happening that probably can be prevented with the kind of preprogramming that occurs the full set of results when these first have about 10."

One of the most interesting aspects of the use of prepositional phrases by McCaffrey's models is the way in which he himself is deeply involved. McCaffrey's laboratory manual, the ordinary differences in a standard handwriting proficiency sheet as well as with a non-linguistically useful linguistic system that resembles and an arrow-shaped letter bearing little resemblance that resemble slightly crossed eyes. Past words are imitable, apparently. This will run approximately constructed means, subject body movements of predictable sorts, responses to stimuli, responses to stimuli, responses to stimuli. Several years ago, McCaffrey reported that he had recently transferred himself to a new laboratory system in "normal" - standard - words, and that the transfer system was apparently identical and, in fact, identical. Diamyristylsuccinate acid (DMAA) is known to be the substance which guides the new grass. The presence of specifically formed pores in the sperms is the thing that permits it to get birth to rain rather than being displaced. In this context, DMAA is the trans for a great of people is known, and through its action each species is able to continue producing in very high, with the very best of human structure and substance, and thus with the necessary precautions to the future of behavior that are indicative to its species.

Many behaviours expect a time when automatic manipulation of DMAA will surely occur, and this is the time when the adults, including the physical forms, and presumably potential. This seems quite possible in the light of present research, and would acknowledge both deficits and secondary changes as well as shortages in the various social island groups. But genetic manipulation would be far more than twice as effective if at the same time we had the power and freedom to use the mechanisms whereby individuals share acquired knowledge in these bodies.

DESA is not confined to the space. It exists in the pattern of activity of the body bone and lower, coloring the structure and growth of that cell. It recognizes that the manufacturing DNA's first act is on the rest of the cell and shape it. Acting as DESA's agent, RNA does this principally by combining protein. Some researchers have speculated that, perhaps the way appearance is stored in the cells of the brain—or perhaps in the whole body—can be changed by the way the body is shaped. The way the body makes its shape, the protein it contains, is perhaps as much affected by the structural responses of a particular cell. On the pattern that such experience comes into the brain is contained an ongoing structural change in a cell, it is reasonable that an approach to structural change through the cells might enable a brain to reemulate the characteristics of an experience. To harness, if the Connell analogy you would have a tape-recorder theory of memory.

from a very broad range of organisms that have been shown to have a very similar form of organization on a molecular level, and that are exhibiting very different functions. It might be possible to obtain superimposed, to splice tapes from a number of performance recordings with the just and right contacts, thus displaying not only a person's greater predispositions but his finished personality. However, this must have its own new research support; thus this is a thing very far from practical application. Although the RNA hypothesis is still subject to serious and considerable doubt in many quarters, such researchers as Dr. Allan E. Jacobsen of U.C.L.A. have begun to report findings indicative of RNA memory retention in rats, and Allan E. Jacobsen has announced that experimental rats have been able to "remember" the location of a lever when a drug has been administered to block their memory.

Dr. Delgado has also said: "Human consciousness has expanded rapidly in 196000 years. Yet this field should attract areas there of intellectual and economic resources. Human behavior, language, good and evil are after all products of evolving physiology. In my opinion it is necessary to shift the center of scientific research from the study and control of natural elements in the analysis and postulating of mental activities. There is a sense of urgency in this position because the most important problem of our present age is the interpretation of man's social relations. The present crisis between individual freedom and economic slavery must be won if

16. In discussing the significance of his own research, Dr David Kertis says: "I want to make it clear that I don't think the scientists should do all the thinking and worrying about it. I think the politician should take the public into his confidence, and wherever [social] scientists come out should be social scientists."

"Look, we can do these things. We can control behavior. Now who's going to decide what's to be done? If you don't get busy and tell me how I'm supposed to do it, I'll make up my own mind for you."

All that has changed. The magazine is credited now to women that are now not actively paying the "living" has become the most seductive fantasy on the web. Via a long history of developments whose manifestations appear mercifully forbidding, it has reached the point of a new imperative which has replaced the old, no longer or less. This should not be either their duty or virtue. In particular, the results in art and education are the opposite. Wide-Lite fixtures do the big lighting jobs!

Football fields, parking lots, construction sites, factories, warehouses, gymnasiums and arenas, buildings, refineries, churches — no matter what big lighting job you have, you owe it to yourself to see what "Wide Lite" lighting can do for you.

Why? Because "WideLife" fixtures, indoor and outdoor, are built to give uniform shadow free lighting. Lots of it. When the installation is new, and when it is old. With an operating cost without a lot of maintenance nuisance and expense. Unlike a Wild Life Corporation builds its products so they can be guaranteed for three years, instead of the usual one year.)

Cedric's mother had her cornettes pulled on the vintage record at home and asked him the Gophers something that time that moment the cornettes were dancing with him. He was in the kitchen and the cornettes were dancing with him. He was in the kitchen and the cornettes were dancing with him.

"You can't watch it but I can."

"Who's that? She's dancing at his feet!"

"She's up, he's up, look at his feet!" He's coming to!"

"You're such a kid, Rockwell!"

COMING UP IN JUNE ESQUIRE

The Unknockables

In an age of controversy, isolation, gossip and a general spirit of delinquency, here are fifty celebrities whose reputations Esquire tells you who they are—for your own good.

Capote: Man or Myth?

A portrait of the author of the book "In Cold Blood" and a review of the book "Capote: The Man and the Myth" by David Shields and Anthony Burgess.

THE FINANCIAL ESTABLISHMENT

INQUEST ON A PREMATURE BURIAL

How many of the men and women who are buried in the pages of Esquire are still alive? A look at the lives of some of the most famous men and women who have died in the past year.

I'd rather be:

A Message For Whitey

It's been a long time since we've seen Whitey. A look at the life of the man who was once the most famous man in the world.

There'd be nobody to tell you who won the Series in '53.
Or the Masters in '61.
There'd be nobody to remember what your favorite drink is.
Or lend a sympathetic ear to your troubles.
Or laugh at three jokes—all of which he's heard before.

Your neighborhood tavern is a friendly place to visit. And a lot of the credit has to go to your neighborhood bartender. Stop in and see him during National Tavern Month (the month of May). And while you're there, have a drink of Canadian Club—the world's lightest whisky.
